

CHANGING THE EDUCATION SYSTEM

G.Ashalatha,

Associate Professor HOD of S&H Department
Sri Sunflower College of Engineering & Technology,
Challapalli, India

Abstract:

The paper is about education system and its changes from past a few years. Why have we been born into this world? The question which everyone faces in their life. All religions in this world have tried to answer this question. The ultimate goal of human life is to lead a happy and peaceful life. This goal can be achieved through education (i.e live and others live). The child should be put to a school near to his or her house, at the age of five. The first concept of every school should be to make the child love to come to school every day and then slowly introduce reading and writing and arithmetic and drawing. There should be no force on time and the student's confidence level must never be broken. The present education system is helping in bringing out students who will work for others and very few entrepreneurs. It looks like education is only a struggle to get a job. Once the student is educated in this new way. He will be confident enough to live his life with the resources available to him and not run after jobs.

Keywords: religions, ultimate goal, reading and writing, entrepreneurs, .etc

Why have we been born into this world? The question which everyone faces in their life. All religions in this world have tried to answer this question. The ultimate goal of human life is to lead a happy and peaceful life. This goal can be achieved through education (i.e live and others live). We have now reached an era where the man can live a most comfortable life compared to any other age from the evolution of human beings.

As man is a social being and has to share the resources on this earth. Education is important and of this primary and secondary education is very important. This ten years of school life are the formative years of future citizens. It is like a foundation, whatever is built after these years is like an addition. The student's perception of learning and society are formed here. I now would like to put some of my ideas on how the primary and secondary education should be for bringing out self-adjustable, disciplined, society-conscious emotionally controlled students.

The child should be put to a school near to his or her house, at the age of five. The first concept of every school should be to make the child love to come to school every day and then slowly introduce reading and writing and arithmetic and drawing. There should be no force on time and the student's confidence level must never be broken. The student, teacher ratio must be followed as per the norms are given by a child psychologist. Equal importance must be given for communication with classmates and games.

Teaching or showing moral stories and community living should be a must. Here students should be taught by example. There should be no marks only levels like if he has completed reading one book he can go for another book. More importance must be given in teaching them how to share things at home and follow the rules of the community. Like standing in a queue for a bus, throwing rubbish into the dustbin etc. This must be taught till the fifth standard. Once in the fifth standard, the education pattern should again change. Library period should a must every day. Books on all subjects which can be read by students from fifth to tenth must be in the library. Next important subject should be agriculture, animal husbandry, health, and basic computers. The qualified psychologist must be appointed for every school and a period allotted teach students how to control desires and emotions. The government should take into account the number of government and private schools in an area and divide the number of students in equal ratio to all schools. The student, teacher ratio should be maintained equally by all schools. This will help in reducing unemployment and pooling all the resources in one place.

The present education system is helping in bringing out students who will work for others and very few entrepreneurs. It looks like education is only a struggle to get a job. Once the student is educated in this new way. He will be confident enough to live his life with the resources available to him and not run after jobs. There are my views on changing the education system. The practicality of it can be tested. There may be some problem in implementing it, but with the help of valuable inputs from like-minded people it can be possible. Life is all about taking the risk for a better tomorrow. So why not with a change in the education system. All of you out there think about it.

References:

- Self Authored